That Tired Feeling

The lassitude, languor and debility peculiar to this season are wholly overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla It purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood, invigorates the nervous system, and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body

"I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for biliousness and all impurities of the blood Last spring I was much benefited by it "—Mrs J W Clement, Franklin, N H

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good, her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla " A second bottle effected a cure

"The beneficial effects from Hood's Sarsaparilla have been more speedy than from any other preparation "—E G Woodman, Wilton, N H.

We ask special attention to the fact that testimonials published by us are from influential persons who are now living and enjoying the health which the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla has given them

Capt J P Thompson of Lowell, Register of Deeds for Middlesex County, Northern District, says I have never found anything that hit my wants as Hood's Sarsaparilla, it purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite and makes me over "

I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family for scrofulous humor with wonderful success "—C C Pickering (Coburn Shuttle Co) Lowell, Mass

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD

At no other season is the system so susceptible to the beneficial effects of medicine, hence this is the time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify your blood and fortify your system against the debilitating effects of Spring weather It sharpens the appetite tones the stomach, invigorates the aged, and imparts new life and energy to all ' My breakfast tasted good this morning for the first time in several months, have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla only three days "

DYSPEPSIA does not get well of itself If you have tried everything without benefit, don't give up, but try Hood's Sarsaparilla No other Sarsaparilla has such a sharpening effect upon the appetite No other preparation tones and strengthens the digestive organs like it

"Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me of dyspepsia, indigestion and debility I can eat anything without that awful distress, have a tremendous appetite —Park Patten, Gardiner Me

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Has met success at home never accorded to any other proprietary medicine. It has successfully combated the strongest competition, and by its superior merit, to day commands the largest sale and greatest confidence wherever it has been introduced An Alderman says Hood's is the strongest Sarsaparilla I ever saw

"I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier in the market "—L J Clement, of the firm of J W & L J Clement, Warner, N H

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Combines in a proportion peculiar to itself, the active medicinal properties of the most approved alterative tonic and blood purifying remedies of the vegetable kingdom It will positively cure, when in the power of medicine, dyspepsia headache biliousness spring debility, kidney complaints scrofula salt rheum and all diseases arising from an impure state or low condition of the blood It is nature's great health restorer, and is not equaled by any other medicine Try it

OUR POLICY

It is not now, nor has it ever been, the policy of the proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla to mislead the public in any way regarding the curative power of Hood's Sarsaparilla In advertising, we shall state facts honestly candidly and allow the people to judge the claims Hood's Sarsaparilla has upon their confidence and patronage Thousands have found good health and relief from terrible suffering, through the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, when every other means failed

FATHER KEMP

Originator of the Old Folks Concerts, and proprietor of the popular shoe store, 1090 Washington street, Boston writes Fifteen years ago I had to give up work Dangerous symptoms, with constant roaring in the head abscesses forming with fearful suffering till they would break my legs from ankle to knee would swell and turn black I used Hood's Sarsaparilla Result To-day am a well man, no pains or ails and can do as much work as forty years ago

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

"I have suffered from Kidney Complaint and Biliousness fifteen years Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. Jonathan J Coburn, Dracut, Mass

LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS

(From the N Y Evening Post)

All Italian bonnet braids are of a deep yellow tint

The fleur de lis is a favorite design upon cream colored sateens

Some of the new spring walking coats of black velvet or satin have high flaring collars, closely covered with large jet beads

Some of the new bonnets of lace straw are wonderfully delicate and airy, and are studded on the brims with mock ruby, pearl opal or large jet beads

The new ficelle lace, which has suddenly become so popular, is made of cream white or pale yellow linen threads, and is used to garnish dresses and wraps as well as bonnets and round hats.

That damasse silks have lost their former glory is proved by the fact that merchants have placed quantities of very handsome patterns upon the 'bargain counter,' marked at a uniform price of one dollar a yard

Handsome Biarritz gloves of very fine undressed kid, to be worn with full dress, have wide satin bands at the tops delicately embroidered in tiny clusters of rosebuds, or painted with a monogram or crest in gold or silver

Long mousquetaire gloves of white Danish kid, embroidered in silver and jet beads look exceedingly well with "evening" dress worn in second mourning, the toilet usually being of a combination of black and white, or silver gray and black, with lace garniture of white or black

A new hat, styled "Over the Garden Wall, is essentially the young ladies' hat of the period It has an enormous brim to be tilted over the eyes and bent up at the back It is dented in on the crown and trimmed round with cascades of ficelle lace, a huge cluster of unmounted crimson roses, and two small sunflowers

Very large handkerchiefs for the shoulders, made of soft twilled silk, bordered with edelweis lace and pointed on the broad hems with trails of delicate flowers in water colors, will be worn this summer over the pretty dresses of flower brocaded muslins and satins made with pointed waists and full pannier overdresses

Little princesse or bebe bonnets made entirely of flowers are again in fashion Among the prettiest are those made of white lilacs mingled with pale pink hedge roses or those of white wood violets with trailing arbutus blossoms intermingled These dainty little capotes are particularly appropriate at weddings, either for the bridesmaid or lady guest

' Worth ' visites are imported made of broche, camel's hair cloth or soft India silk and wool fabrics, in Persian patterns, trimmed with chenille fringe showing the varied colors employed in the material composing the wraps They are lined with dark wine-colored or olive-green satin, and fastened with chenille cords and medium sized iridescent buttons, encircled with enamelled silver

One of the principal features in dress trimmings this spring is the garnitures made of cut out edges, dents of various shapes and sizes, or round, square, or oblong scallops "Dents de loup" are lined and turned back to show the bright color underneath Some of these are made quite broad, and not only trim the foot of the skirt, but are set in full double rows around the edge of the long-pointed bodice in regular Elizabethan style

Some very attractive tiffin cloths have been added to the ever increasing store of fine drapery in which all housekeepers delight They bid fair to rival the five-o'clock tea cloths, many of which look far too beautiful to set lunch upon Very pretty and comparatively inexpensive table covers are made of ordinary brown linen, the corners embroidered in crewels, with a handsome bordering made of sage green satin, finished with an edge of ficelle lace

Leaders of fashion—ladies of taste and refinement—have in no instance adopted the crinoline of other days, which is said to be in fashion at the present time, still, there is no doubt of a greatly increasing fulness of skirt, which, if kept within moderate limits, is far preferable to the drawbacks and ungainly lank lines of the other extreme The modern crinolette is universally worn, and is both useful and graceful. The old fashioned wire monstrosity known as the hoop was neither.

Sloping shoulders are enduringly unfashionable. In days gone by their possession was considered indispensable to establish any claim to having a good figure. Nowadays fashionable women dress the shoulders as much as possible to produce the desired height and squareness—shirred scarfs, high puffed sleeves, and even beaded epaulets and floral garnitures being set upon the shoulders to produce extra height. So it seems that even the standard of the beautiful is regulated by the dictates of fashion.

A novel dress cap has appeared resembling in shape the pictured of caps worn by the Italian peasantry. The crown is somewhat high and peaked, and the brim or band rather wide. One of these shapes exhibited is covered with black sprigged net on a foundation of the same color. A pale primrose crêpe scarf is carelessly twisted around the edge of the brim and fastened down here and there by small venomous-looking green insects of various sizes, and of a kind which it would puzzle an entomologist to classify.

New Parisian corsages show the fronts continued in long panels, which reach nearly to the foot of the underskirt, after the manner of the fronts of the old French surtout, though fitting the form much more closely. A handsome dress of prune-colored satin, covered with tiny shirred ruffles, has a corsage of darker prune-colored velvet, the long panel fronts embroidered with shaded silks of still deeper hues than the velvet. In the back the corsage is cut into deep vandykes, underneath which is set a Louis Quinze scarf of the satin fabric.

Æsthetic coachmen and footmen wear buttonhole bouquets of pale yellow jonquils and scarlet tulip blossoms

The embroidery on kid gloves is very artistic and pretty this season, for example, on brown gloves the small leaves and buds shade gradually from coffee color to palest yellow, on dark green gloves the silk graduates from invisible or bottle-green to the soft hues of the tender leaves of spring, black gloves are embroidered in contrasting silks of various shades, all alike being shaded from the darkest to the lightest tints of the same dye, and now that shaded and contrasting colors are so much in vogue, the new gloves will doubtless be an harmonious addition to the fashionable toilet

A good way to freshen a round hat of straw which has become somewhat faded or yellowed by wear, is to sponge the hat with diluted ammonia water and a bit of white soap to cleanse it thoroughly When quite dry cover the brim with figured net, black or white as preferred Languedoc netting is pretty, and can be bought at a greatly reduced price being a little out of fashion Shir the net close to the band around the crown, and leave the outer edge nearly plain, simply veiling, but not hiding the straw beneath An Alsatian bow of wide ribbon and a cluster of bright flowers will cover the crown

Many of the fabrics used during the cold season will be worn for many weeks to come, while the addition of myriads of thinner fabrics and lighter hues and styles will give an uncommonly varied choice from which all tastes may be accommodated, but broche watered silk velvets, cashmere, and ladies cloth costumes will all be worn on the cool days of both spring and summer Gros grain and faille will be largely used, as their return to public favor is widely recognized Soft drapery and semi transparent fabrics such as viole religieuse and many other varieties known under the generic name of "veilings," will be worn in combination with gros grain silks polka dotted or striped satins, and moires In woollens bright flecks of color on neutral grounds are very fashionable and the tinsel woven fabrics of 'Bective fame have achieved quite a success even in America The demi season dresses are decidedly quite in style, tailor made costumes being so greatly in favor

Dressmakers are exhausting ingenuity in devising new trimmings for the bottoms of handsome French dress skirts, and as a result there is a great diversity of garnitures—chicoree ruches, shirred pelisses shell plaitings, coquilles, fringed quillings and bouillonnes, Panniers are invariably worn above the skirts thus trimmed, their style and fulness varying according to the material of which they are composed With stiff fabrics the "Camargo" panniers are worn these being very bouffant For gauze, muslin, or any light or transparent fabric, the "Sylphide" panniers are preferred, and are mostly used upon dancing dresses, the panniers being edged with feathery ruchings or fringes of drooping flowers. For silks and satins are the 'Cleopatra' pannier, laid over the hips in full dress plaits, and bordered with applique bands in Grecian style The Madrilene is double, that is it has an under pannier of surah or other material, with a second pannier of Spanish lace, either scarf or shawl, draped and drawn back with the one underneath This last style is very becoming to tall, slender figures, and very effective on wedding dresses, with under panniers of silk or satin, draped with a second one of costly white lace

STATE NEWS.

Cumberland

The Press says the Portland market for sugar and molasses cooperage is quiet and stocks on hand at this port are light, but fully equal to the demand as the Cuba season is drawing to a close, and there is not usually much activity during the summer months The exports of sugar hogshead shooks from Portland to Cuba for the year ending May 1 1882, as given by Messrs Nutter, Kimball & Co , were 366 100 and of hoops, 208 192 In addition to there an estimated number of 50 000 shooks were taken by the Windward Islands and Porto Rico

A boy named Dennis, employed as messenger in the Western Union telegraph office Portland jumped upon a team, when the team starting suddenly, he met with an accident by which his collar bone was broken

The Biddeford Light Infantry will come to Portland on the occasion of the Mechanic Blues' anniversary which will be celebrated June 23d. There will be a reception an address by Mayor Libby and other arrangements.

The Belfast Journal says a false alarm of fire Sunday evening turned out the fire department, and broke up the evening prayer meetings.

It will be remembered that last June James B. Doyle, at one time a resident of Belfast, was tried at Chicago for having in his possession counterfeit bonds, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. He was granted a new trial which began last week. When he was arrested $200,000 in well executed counterfeit bonds were found in his valise. His arrest broke up one of the most extensive counterfeiting gangs in the country. Doyle's defence is that he received the bonds in a business transaction, not suspecting their true character.—Journal

Washington.

The Washington Conference of Congregational churches will meet with the East Machias church on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13th and 14th. First preacher, Rev. E. L. Walbridge of Milbridge. Second, Rev. Daniel Greene of Machias. A large Conference is expected.

The log driving dams on the East Machias river are all in good repair. They are owned by a log driving company consisting of George E. Burrall & Co., J. O. Pope & Co., and P. S. J. Talbot & Co. These three firms being the only lumber operators now in business on this river. This company is not incorporated as a Log Driving Co but these log owners act in concert in all driving operations, all being done for mutual interest

The Eastport Sentinel says "A frightful accident occurred a few days since by which Freddie, a young son of Edward Cross, lost the sight of one eye, and the other will be partially if not wholly destroyed A number of boys were amusing themselves by throwing stones at a glass bottle and while the injured lad stepped to the bottle to set it in place, one of the other boys broke it, a piece of the shattered glass lodging in young Cross eye, with the above effect

The Sentinel says Burglars have been trying their hand in Eastport again One night recently the hardware store of G W Capen, on Union wharf was entered through a window but, there being no money in the drawer nothing of value was taken. Some think a person was concealed in the store when Mr Capen locked up as the glass had the appearance of having been removed from the inside On Saturday night last, an attempt was made to enter the millinery store of Miss A M Davis through a window in the rear The robbers were frightened away by Officers Follis and Mitchell, whose suspicions had been aroused by seeing two suspicious looking characters in that vicinity during the evening Only last week, a fire which looked very much as if an attempt had been made to burn the town was discovered under the flooring of Hayscale Block occupied by Messrs Hinkley & Co and Messrs Hatheway & Davis During the morning the occupants of these stores smelled smoke about their premises but could not find where it came from, until some one discovered the fire under the wharf on one of the stringers close up to the flooring. There is no other way for fire to get there unless being set Those who saw it were of the opinion that an attempt had been made the night before to set fire to these buildings but the wood being damp it did not burn up as soon as was expected

CHARLES W DABNEY JR Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station of North Carolina, has issued his Annual Report for 1881 The work of this station is conferring great benefit on the agriculture of the State, its labors being largely devoted to the analysis of fertilizers and of soils, of marls, mucks minerals and feeding stuffs, to the examination of seeds of grasses and weeds, to the study of insects injurious to vegetation, and to the examination of drinking water and articles of food for the State Board of Health The station was organized in 1877 The result of its work has been that lands which had to be left uncultivated, have, since the establishment of the control of fertilizers been made to yield fairly good returns During this period, or since 1877 worthless articles offered as fertilizers have been expelled from the State, and only honest ones placed on the market The difference made itself appear at once The trade extended Sixty thousand tons of fertilizers was sold in the State in 1879 While the quality has improved, the average cash price has decreased The census returns show that this trade is intimately connected with the extention of cotton culture and that its production has more than doubled within the last ten years With the aid of superphosphates cotton has extended its domain forty or fifty miles up the slope of the Blue Ridge

Four hundred and fifty samples of all kinds, including minerals, rocks mineral waters, fertilizers, &c ,were examined at the station in 1881 The station now occupies ten commodious apartments in the new building As the Director states, "all the analyses are made by the most thorough and accurate methods No rough short-cut or uncertain volumetric determinations are used

PORTLAND STATE CONVENTION

WILL BE HELD IN

CITY HALL, PORTLAND,

Thursday, June 15, 1882,

At 11 o'clock A. M.,

for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor and four candidates for Representatives in Congress to be supported at the September election and to transact any other business that may properly come before it.

The basis of representation will be as follows Each city town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate and for each seventy five votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1880 an additional delegate and for a fraction of forty votes in excess of seventy five votes, one additional delegate.

The State Committee will be in session in the Reception Room of the City Hall at nine o'clock on the morning of the Convention for the purpose of receiving the credentials of delegates.

All citizens of Maine, whatever may have heretofore been their party affiliations, who believe in the purity of the ballot and honesty in its count, in popular government unobstructed by Executive usurpations, in an independent and honest Judiciary, whose Judges shall not be exposed to the assaults of partisan hatred and revenge in a safe and sound currency for the people, in a reasonable encouragement and development of our industries, and protection of our Laborers against the cheap labor of Europe, by wise and judicious laws in efficient measures for the encouragement of American shipping and shipbuilding in popular education in temperance in an economical just and efficient administration of public affairs are cordially invited to unite with the Republicans of the State in selecting delegates to this Convention

Per order Republican State Committee

WILLIAM P. FRYE, Chairman

FRED N. DOW Secretary

Sargent the American Minister to Germany, has arrived at Berlin

The House Committee on Appropriations has completed the annual pension appropriation bill and directed Representative O'Neill to report it to the House. The aggregate amount appropriated is $100 000 000

Where is Perry Belmont? He spluttered bravely in his rocket like course toward reputation and Blaine and now we cannot even say that he came down like the stick A communication from the Committee on Foreign Affairs will be welcome.—Providence Press

The strength the Independent movements in Texas are showing is alarming the Democrats and they are looking anxiously about for a popular candidate for Governor who can hold the party together solidly The only man who it is thought, is able to do this is Governor Roberts As he has declined a renomination, an effort is making to get him to reconsider his decision

The drift of sentiment in Illinois is said to be in favor of a late State Convention Sometime in the early part of August is thought to be soon enough The only State officers to be elected are a Treasurer and a Superintendent of Public Instruction A full House and half of the members of the State Senate are also to be chosen A three months canvass is considered quite long enough for these purposes and for the different Congressional canvasses

The President has appointed a Board of Visitors to attend the annual examination at the Military Academy at West Point, as follow J G Chapman, of St Louis, Clifton H Moor, of Clinton Ill, General Horace Porter, of New York, General Morris Schaff of Boston, General J D Tillman, Fayetteville Tenn, J B Teat, Monroe Wis, and Hon Marcus L Ward, of Newark N J

The President of the Senate has also appointed as members of the board Senators T W Ferry and L Q C Lamar The Speaker of the House of Representatives has not yet designated the members to represent that body

Philadelphia has a school building which dates back to colonial times During the revolutionary war it was used as a hospital and in 1788 both the Congress of the United States and the General Assembly of Pennsylvania made application for its use as a hall in which those bodies could sit The boys are summoned to their studies by a bell which was brought from England in the ship whose cargo of tea was thrown overboard in Boston Harbor. On the steeple survives the wooden image of a royal crown which the juvenile rebels of Germantown during the Revolution used to pelt with arrows It is located at the corner of School lane and Green street.

The political situation in Kentucky does not grow any more favorable for the Bourbons There is a widespread feeling of dissatisfaction with the continuance of Captain Henry on the ticket, and thousands of Democrats will not vote at all or will vote for Colonel Jacob, the Anti-Bourbon candidate The Louisville Democrat, without doubt, voices the sentiments of many in its party when it says "There are hundreds of Democratic voters in nearly every county who are willing either not to vote or to vote against their party just to teach it a needed lesson Here in Jefferson County it is a low estimate to say there are 5 000 Democratic voters who will either not vote or vote against Captain Henry if he persists in being a candidate"

That Secretary Chandler should be opposed to any further expenditure of public money upon Arctic expeditions is no more than was to be expected from a man of his good judgment and sound common sense. We have had enough and more than enough of this particular variety of enterprise If there were any good to be gained by penetrating to the pole, there might be some little excuse for renewing the attempt to accomplish what there is every reason to believe is a physical impossibility. But the complete success of an Arctic expedition, assuming for the moment that such success lies within the limits of human achievements, would be utterly barren of any practical benefit to the world The topographical character of the Polar region is not open to doubt, and it is impossible to imagine what useful purpose would be served by the demonstration of facts of which we are morally certain already. Of course, if private adventurers insist upon risking their lives, they must be allowed to do so, but no assistance or encouragement should be extended them by the Government, and they should be given clearly to understand that any attempt in that direction will be made at their own peril.—Philadelphia North American.

THE CONGRESSIONAL NOMINATIONS.

[From the Dexter Gazette, May 12.]

We cordially endorse the above editorial from the Press, and feel certain that while it reflects the sentiment of the State at large, it is especially applicable to this section, if personal claims, and services to the State and party are to be taken into account in the selection of our candidates we know of none which merit a heartier and fuller recognition than those of Capt Boutelle, and the article which we copy from the Portland Press embodies a strong and unanswerable statement of them.

A SAMPLE OF BOURBON REVENGE.

INNOCENT COLORED REPUBLICANS MADE TO SUFFER BY THE SOUTH CAROLINA DEMOCRATS

A Charleston, S C, despatch says During the excitement incidental to the election trials and in the absence of any trustworthy information on the subject, no allusion was made to the News and Courier's "Orangeburg outrage" upon Henry Gallichat, a colored Democrat, who, it was claimed, was whipped "nigh unto death" for his political opinions by colored Republicans a few weeks ago Henry Glover, Ashbury Howard, and nine other colored men were arrested for the offence and after a brief trial all of them were found guilty by a packed Democratic jury, and Judge Aldrich has just sentenced them to five years in the State Penitentiary at hard labor Mr E A. Webster, Postmaster at Orangeburg, on his arrival in this city, stated that he was present at the trial and that there was not the slightest particle of evidence to warrant the conviction of the unfortunate victims of Bourbon animosity Gallichat, he said, had made himself obnoxious to colored men working in a turpentine distillery—none of whom have yet been arrested—by stealing bacon, and slanderous gossip They whipped him for these offences, though not to the cruel extent claimed by the Bourbon journals. He recognized two of his tormentors, but neither of them have been caught. In the absence of the real culprits, and as an act of reprisal for the political prosecutions in Charleston eleven colored Republicans were arrested Solicitor Jervey packed a jury by the same method so bitterly denounced by District Attorney Melton and with better success The only two Republicans on the jury were ordered to 'stand aside,' and eleven white and one colored Democrats were sworn in There was no evidence to connect the defendants with the whipping beyond the unsubstantiated hearsay testimony of the complainant, but the Bourbons wanted blood," continued Mr Webster, "and they had to have it" Judge Aldrich, of reconstruction fame, vindicated the majesty of the law by delivering a political harangue in charging the jury, in which the Federal prosecutions of Democrats were prominently mentioned, and upon the reception of a "cut and dried" verdict he imposed a sentence entirely out of proportion to the offence complained of, even if the prisoners had been guilty, which, Mr Webster positively asserts, they were not.

This is the first of the many political prosecutions that may now be looked for in the State courts, and the result is a sample of the justice Republicans may expect at the hands of the political demagogues who control the law machinery in this State Mr Webster is a thoroughly trustworthy gentleman, his statements are entitled to belief, and he considers this one of the most glaring outrages ever perpetrated under the cover of law.

MAN OF WAR DISABLED

Samro K Takahaski, the Japanese consul in New York, has received newspapers which confirm the report of a serious accident to the United States man of war Alert. Mr. Takahaski read the account to a reporter The reporter listened but said nothing The consul laughed in high glee at the reporter's ignorance o Japanese, and explained the situation in excellent English as follows "From this report it would seem that the Alert was making her way from Japan to Yokohama by a short cut through the Wootiwoomi (pronounced Utimi) sea This sheet of water is about 200 miles long extending from Shimonoseki to Kobe The latter place is an open where vessels of all nationalities go to take in cargoes of copper and rice By sailing through this sea the Alert could save a large detour, and pass out through the Oshimasaki channel, which is about 50 miles from Kobe It was near the mouth of this channel that the Alert came in collision with the imperial yacht Jingal Kan. The report says that the United states ship was badly damaged, but gives no further particulars It will probably be three or four weeks before I receive any official account"

The death of Martin, the lion tamer, author of the "Memoires d'un Dompteur," is announced from Amsterdam. Unlike most men of his dangerous calling, he died a natural death at the ripe age of ninety, surrounded by his family He was only once attacked by a lion during the course of his long career

A New York inspector discovered recently a factory in which two hundred girls were locked up at work. No means of escape in case of fire had been provided, and the owner of the building stated that he had offered to put up a fire escape, but the manufacturers objected because it would interfere with the display signs.

Heavy rains in Illinois and other parts of the West during the last few days have greatly damaged the wheat crop and delayed farming operations West of the Mississippi the prospects are more flattering In Central Iowa the wheat, oats and rye are in fine condition the corn land nearly all plowed, and early planting assured, with a greatly increased acreage In Southern Kansas the crops are in splendid condition, and the wheat harvest a but a few weeks off There is prospect of a big crop of corn Advices from Minnesota and Dakota are also favorable

[From the New York Daily Commercial Bulletin]

"It is noticeable that, coupled with the announcement of the death of almost every man of note nowadays comes the fair her statement that his life was insured for a greater or less amount The more prominent the man especially in the business world, the larger the sum of insurance he is found to have secured Thus it appears to be the usual thing for sagacious and prudent men, who have proved their financial sagacity by success, to wisely protect their business and family interests by the ready and effectual means of life insurance

A FEARFUL ACCIDENT

Child Burned to Death.

BATH May 12 A special to the Sun from Falmouth, seven miles from Portland, gives the particulars of a sad accident. Mrs Samuel W Buckman, left a little girl two years old boy with her baby who was sick in bed in her room while she went to a neighbor's. During her absence the child went down cellar and into the kitchen, climbed a barrel and took some matches from a box and while playing with them set his clothing on fire. His mother up stairs heard the child scream but thought the mother was with it. Screams becoming more frequent and alarming she got out of bed and went to the kitchen and found the little one all enveloped in flames. Everything possible was done for the child but the child's body was so badly burned that he died in a few hours afterwards.

WASHINGTON, May 12. John F. Foote, of Rawlins, Wyoming Territory; P. T. Hinman, of Nixon, W. J. Edgarton, of Lake City, Col; B F. Allen, of Salida, Col., were before the grand jury to-day giving testimony in relation to the Star Route service in Colorado since July 1st, 1877, and the connection with it of ex Senator S W. Dorsey, J. W Dorsey, M. C. Rerdell, J. M. Peck and John S. Miner.

Appointments

The President has appointed the following board to attend the annual examination of the Naval Academy the first of June: Commodore Franklin and Capt. Johnson, United States Navy; N. M Hubbard, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Wm. A Courtenay, of Charleston, S C; Aaron F Stevens, of Nashua, N H, Charles Watrous, of New York The President of the Senate appointed Dawes, of Massachusetts, and Jones, of Florida, to represent the Senate. No one selected from the House Committee Work.

The Senate Finance Committee this morning referred the bonded spirits bill to Morrill and Bayard, as a sub-committee to prepare a substitute which will not permit the indefinite retention of spirits in bond, but a maximum bonded period of about five years, also to provide that bonds shall be given for the full amount of tax, and will extend the proposed benefits to spirits made from proof, such as apple or grape brandies

Cabinet Meeting.

At a Cabinet meeting to day the case of Sergeant Mason was considered, with a view to his pardon, but no conclusion was reached

The Tariff Commission bill was also discussed and laid over till the next meeting, when it is expected the composition of the commission will be determined on.

The business before the Spanish American Claims Commission was also informally discussed.

Clerks Discharged From the Navy Department

A Petition for Mason's Pardon.

A petition for the pardon of Sergeant Mason, signed by 3000 employes of the Baltimore & Ohio and Northern Central Railroad, and large manufacturing houses in Baltimore, was presented to the President to day

The Indians

It is reported the Secretary of the Interior has decided to adopt a policy of disarming all the Indians in the Western states and Territories, subject to the effective control of the Government.

Winter Wheat Crop.

The May report of the condition of winter wheat, by the statistician of the Department of Agriculture, makes the average of the entire breadth 100 the standard, of unusually healthy and medium growth The average condition in April was 102, which is the highest reported for many years. In April last year it was 86. Only the states of the North Atlantic coast and those at the head of the Ohio valley, Texas, and those of the Pacific coast fail to reach 100, while the extraordinary vigor of the crop in other sections fully compensate for these local deficiencies.

Sudden Death

James Q. Smith, contestant for the seat of Representative Charles M Shelley, of Alabama, died to night of pneumonia after an illness of less than forty eight hours.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS--First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON, May 12 A voluminous communication was received from the Secretary of War concerning trials of ordnance and as to what officers or agents of the Government are or have been personally interested in the ordnance inventions and patents, temporarily tabled.

Mr. Vest reported favorably from the Commerce Committee the Senate bills authorizing the construction of bridges across the Mississippi at Memphis and across the Arkansas river at Van Buren, Crawford county, Arkansas, the latter authorizing the St Louis and San Francisco Railroad to build the bridge, passed

Mr. Mahone introduced a bill to authorize the construction of public buildings at Lynchburg, Harrisonburg and Abingdon, Virginia, referred

The bill reported from the select committee on epidemic diseases, imposing sanitary regulations on the foreign shipping in the United States ports, came up as first upon the calendar, but a motion for immediate consideration was defeated and the bill retained its place on the calendar.

The Senate bill amending the law which protects registration trademarks was passed.

The Senate resumed consideration of the Intermediate Appellate Court bill, the question being on its passage. Messrs Pugh, Davis and Lapham spoke in favor of the bill. The discussion was continued upon the amendments to the details which were rejected, except in two cases, when they were accepted by the friends of the measure without a vote. The bill then passed, yeas, 32, nays 18

A conference report on the Fortification Appropriation bill was presented and agreed to, and a conference report on the Agricultural Appropriation bill was also submitted and adopted, adjourned to Monday.

House

Mr. Hobbitzel, of Maryland, rising to a question of privilege, offered a resolution directing the Committee on Claims to investigate into the conduct of the clerk of that committee in connection with a certain communication and report his action to the House, adopted.

Mr. Williams, of Wisconsin, introduced a bill authorizing the Secretary of State to take the necessary steps for the removal of the remains of the late Judson K Ipatrick from Chili to New York for interment, passed.

The Senate amendment to the House bill donating condemned cannon for monumental purposes was concurred in. Mr. Forney, of Alabama, presented the conference report on the Fortification Appropriation bill, the bill was agreed to.

The House then resumed the consideration of the Geneva Award bill.

After brief speeches by Messrs. Hooker of Mississippi, Hammond of Georgia, Rosecrans of California, Ray of New Hampshire, Reed of Maine, and House of Tennessee, moved to lay the majority bill and substitute on the table; rejected. The vote recurred on the substitute of the minority and was rejected, 46 to 109. The bill was then passed, 132 to 66. Mr. Valentine, of Nebraska, submitted a conference report on the Agricultural Appropriation bill.

Various reports of a private character were submitted and appropriately disposed of.

Mr. Crapo called up the special order, but Mr Randall raised a question of consideration in favor of the private calendar Some disposition was shown on the Democratic side to filibuster, and the yeas and nays were ordered. The vote resulted—yeas, 116, nays, 10—in favor of proceeding to the consideration of the special order.

Mr. Randall raised a point of no quorum and a call of the House was ordered. The call disclosed the presence of 211 members —more than a quorum—and the vote again recurred on the question of consideration. Again the Democrats, as a rule, refused to vote and the House was left without a quorum. Finally, after considerable confusion, at 4.25, a motion to adjourn until to-morrow was agreed to.

KANSAS.

A Narrow Escape.

PARSONS, May 12.

An excursion train of the Missouri Press Association, while on the way to Galveston, Texas, collided with a runaway engine on the Missouri Pacific Railway near Oswego, Kansas, early this morning. Both engines were completely wrecked, but none of the passengers, numbering several hundred, were hurt, although badly shaken up and frightened.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

The Assassins.

LONDON, May 12. The man Nagle stated at Southport that the men who offered him money to assist in the murders were canal boatmen. Mr. Palmer, who has acted as volunteer detective in several important cases in a communication to the St. James Gazette says he has reason to know that the arrests of the assassins will be facilitated if the Government will give a guarantee not to surrender the informer in event of his being claimed by the Russian or German police.

Earl Spencer on the Situation.

DUBLIN, May 12. Earl Spencer, replying to a deputation of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce and Belfast Corporation, assured them that the authorities would do their utmost to discover the assassins of Cavendish and Burke. The Government would endeavor to deal liberally with the quest on, which, like the arrears of rent, was retarding the restoration of order in Ireland. He earnestly appealed to all classes to support the Government. He read a letter written by Lady Frederick Cavendish, in which she says "I would never grudge the sacrifice of my darling's life if it only leads to the putting down of the frightful spirit of evil in Ireland. He himself would never grudge it if thereby death could do more than life." Earl Spencer said: "England is determined to do justice to Ireland, with a devotion equal to though not surpassing that so tragically cut short, but then from the darkest night there may rise brightest day."

A Lively Meeting.

NEW YORK, May 12. Cooper Institute was crowded to-night with those desiring to participate in the expression of the sentiment of the Irish Americans in New York, concerning the murders in Dublin. Anticipating trouble from the O'Donovan Rossa faction, 100 policemen were distributed throughout the hall and the Land Leaguers were judiciously placed so they could assist the officers if necessary. Rossa himself sat in the centre of the hall with several policemen near him presided and in an opening address said that as Irishmen they had assembled to express publicly their abhorrence of the crime and to condemn the men who conceived it. (A voice, three cheers for their killing.) The next speaker, Hon. Richard O Gorman, was frequently interrupted by the cries of "Three cheers for the assassins, dynamite, etc." A set of resolutions was then read and adopted, after which Major Horgan arose from the audience and desired to offer an amendment. The Mayor tried to stop him and invited him to the platform, on ascending which he was cheered by the Rossa faction who mistook him for one of their number. When he got on the platform the Mayor introduced Dr Wm. R. Wallace and confusion ensued, the disturbing element calling for Horgan. Dr Wallace succeeded in being heard and repudiated the crime in Ireland.

James Redpath

said the assassinations were a fatal blow to the progress of liberty. The assassinations were the deeds of Gladstone and Forster, as were also the murders of Ellen McDonough and the boys of Ballynahar. If ever there was a man unfit to inhabit this Globe, that man was Burke, and if he were guilty of Burke's deeds, and went to Ireland he would think himself deserving of the same fate Whenever the speaker spoke of force toward England the Rossa faction shouted incendiary threats.

Mayor Horgan, amid cries of "Shut up" "Bounce him!" "Go on" proceeded to read his resolutions. These cries angered the mayor and he turned and addressed several strong remarks to those on the platform.

Incendiary Resolutions.

Quiet, however, was restored. He read the amendment. It reads that while it may be deemed a matter of expediency to express regret for the slaying of Cavendish and Burke, we, Irish exiles of New York, express our great regret that England should still continue the old time practice of murdering our people in Ireland by buckshot, by bayonet and starvation, and it is deemed more becoming that we, representatives of the Irish race in this great metropolis of America, should express our sympathy with Gladstone's murdered victims of eviction than by pandering to the wishes of the Lord Norths of to-day, who are worthy descendants of the butchers of Wyoming and Cherry Valley massacres in our own fair land and Drogheda and Wexford in the land of our birth.

THE BUFFALO BANK.

The Examiner's Statement.

BUFFALO, May 12. In the statement of the affairs of the defunct First National Bank, Examiner Young says: R Porter Lee had been guilty of systematic embezzlement of the bank's funds ever since he had control of its management He has been led into it by Herman J Hall and other speculators and stock gamblers, who got the largest share of the money. When Lee saw that a collapse was at hand he transferred to Hall 578 shares of stock This bank, as stated, discounted for Hall eleven pieces of paper amounting to $190,000 without security, although Hall already had $220,000 in loans here, and paid his own notes not yet due and payable direct and indirect for $154,875. These things show plainly that he realized his position, the impending ruin of the association of which he was at the head and his accountability to the department and to the creditors of this bank whose money he recklessly squandered.

RHODE ISLAND

The Sprague Estate.

PROVIDENCE, May 12 The members of the firm of Wilbour, Jackson & Co. appeared in Court to day in answer to the citation to appear and show cause why they should not be attached for contempt of Court, in failing to start the auction sale of the Sprague properties at the upset price of $2,880,000 as agreed upon with the Court Jackson stated his offer was a confidential communication and not to have been used in Court, that the conditions of the sale were changed by the Court after his offer was made and that several parties who had been depended upon in connection with the transaction had declined to perform their part. The Court took the matter into consideration and will probably announce its decision May 20th.

CONDENSED DESPATCHES.

The London News says it is probable Gladstone will shortly resign the Chancellorship of the Exchequer.

A Chicago despatch says: The Republican State Central Committee yesterday decided to hold the State Convention at Springfield, June 29th.

FIRE ALARM A fire alarm was sounded a few minutes before six o'clock yesterday afternoon. A large pile of cooper shavings and general rubbish in the depression near the corner of Railroad street and the Hampden road was discovered in a bright blaze. The fire department turned out and one stream played for some time on the burning pile. If the fire had not been discovered early, considerable damage might have been entailed as there are numerous wooden buildings not far distant. The fire was undoubtedly set by boys.

THE SHOCKING ACCIDENT AT GREENVILLE Announcement has been made of the shocking accident in Greenville by which Capt Hiram Mansell was instantly killed last week. A correspondent of the Piscataquis Observer gives the following particulars of the sad affair "Capt. Mansell was engaged in sawing wood with a circular saw attached to a small steam engine While examining the belt which carried the saw his hand by some means became entangled in the balance-wheel, which was revolving with great rapidity; and he was drawn upon the shaft, and crushed between the wheel and the frame that supported it with a violence that caused momentary death. Mr. Mansell has been well known as a guide about the lake for several years, and last summer was in command of the steamer "Rebecca," and was expected to occupy that position the coming season. He was thirty-two years of age, and leaves a wife and five children, who were dependent upon his earnings for their support. A subscription was at once started to express the sympathy felt for his family, and to help them, which has amounted to one hundred and eighteen dollars, and the hope is entertained that more will be added. The funeral services were held at the church Sunday, and were very fully attended."

THE MATE OF THE L. J. MORSE The Bath Times says: "Peter Erricson, mate of the ship Llewellyn J. Morse, who brought the ship to New York while Capt Ames came by steamer, belongs in Bath, and has arrived at home here since the tragic death of Capt. Ames and his wife in New York. Mr. Erricson was Swede and came to Bath some 12 years ago with Capt. L. Soule in the ship Shattemuck, since which time he has made his home with Capt. Soule's family. He was some 20 years of age when he first came here, yet from an intense desire to learn, having had no advantages in early life, he entered the Bath Grammar School, and, though a grown man, was content to be classed with the youngest children in the school. Residents of Court street, where Capt Soule lived at that time, remember him well His aptness at learning helped him rapidly forward, but he did not continue in the school more than a year or two, as after having gained a fair start he could study by himself He has followed the sea nearly all the time since leaving school and is now well qualified to command a ship, as is shown from his bringing the L J. Morse home from the East Indies. The Llewellyn J. Morse is 1400 tons, was built in Brewer in 1877, and is owned by L J Morse and others of Bangor."

AMUSEMENTS.

The Troubadours.

The Opera House was thronged last evening with a large and brilliant assemblage. The attraction was "The Brook" by Salsbury's Troubadours, a company which has not previously visited Bangor but whose fame had been heralded from the leading cities on both sides of the Atlantic. The troupe embraces only five persons and it seems hardly possible that so few can present a performance of such varied and entrancing interest The participants are Mr. N Salsbury, Mr. John Webster, Mr. John Gourlay, Miss Nellie McHenry and Miss Ray Samuels. "The Brook" is a laughable and musical extravaganza which is well nigh indescribable. The play is in two acts, the first transpiring at Montrose Villa and the second devoted to depicting the pleasure of a jolly pic-nic. Throughout it is of fascinating interest and the audience is continuously amused by the ridiculous mishaps, strange situations and remarkable performances. The participants were all very fine and succeeded in presenting one of the most enjoyable entertainments given here for a long time. Miss Samuels is a graceful actress and her beautiful singing was heartily received and applauded. Miss McHenry is a wonderfully vivacious lady and she sang, danced and acted with sprightliness and gayety; she figures very conspicuously throughout the play and in a high degree amused and delighted the audience. Mr. Salsbury gave some character impersonations and his portrayal of the tramp was a masterly effort. Mr. John Gourlay in his song was especially ludicrous and Mr. Webster was very good in his part. The entertainment proved one of very rare enjoyment, the audience was in the best of spirits throughout the evening and the laughter and applause was unbounded and continuous. The rural operatic jubilee was brought to a termination by the customary summer shower and the curtain dropped with the troupe singing "Rain, rain, go away; come again another day." The Troubadours will present "The Brook" again at a matinee this afternoon and this will be the last opportunity to witness this interesting piece. This evening the Troubadours will close their engagement in the Opera House by a presentation of the musical novelty "Green Room Fun." The sale of tickets has been large and crowded houses will doubtless be in attendance at both of the performances.

Sunday Services.

A Sunday School concert will be held at the First Baptist church to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock.

Rev. R. L. Howard will preach in the Christian church at West Bangor to-morrow afternoon.

Rev. Henry L. Griffin will attend the service at the Home for Aged Women tomorrow afternoon.

Police Court.

Two parties were up yesterday for single sales, and each was fined $20 and costs.

A West side saloon keeper was up on a search and seizure process and was fined $100 and costs.

Obituary.

An Oldtown correspondent writes: "It is seldom that our village is cast into deeper mourning than was occasioned by the death of Mrs Sadie C McCausland, the wife of our esteemed townsman, N. C. McCausland, whose lamp of love and goodness went out suddenly on Wednesday morning, May 10th Eight years ago she came to this town to aid in caring for a wife of her brother, Mr. E. A. Conant. Four years ago next August she was married to Mr. McCausland and has since that time been a resident of our town. During this time she has been associated with the Baptist parish of this place and a constant attendant in the Sabbath school Her life has been a constant scattering of sunbeams to all around By her loving and genial disposition and by the constant adorning of her home with the choicest flowers both of nature and grace, she made it seem like a miniature of heaven in which we believe she now shines as one of God's chosen. She leaves a large circle of friends to mourn her loss and the sympathy of all is extended to her devoted husband in his loneliness.

'Twas early day, a fitting hour
For souls like hers to steal
Away from earth, like some fair flower
Impressed with heaven's own seal,
Like some bright vision of the night,
Or like a meteor's ray
Of brilliancy, upon the sight
She calmly passed away,
And thus a gentle spirit's gone
To seek its home above,
And mingle with that holy throng,
With him whose name is love'"

In Memoriam

At a meeting of the Penobscot County Bar held out of respect for the memory of the late Daniel Sanborn, Esq., speeches were made by members and appropriate resolutions were passed. Hon A. W. Paine opened with remarks and was responded to by Chief Justice Appleton. A committee consisting of N. Wilson, S. F. Humphrey and John Varney, Esqs., reported the following resolutions.

Resolved, That in the recent dispensation of Divine Providence, in the removal, by death of our brother, the late Daniel Sanborn, we are, again, forcibly reminded of the uncertainty of this mortal life—and, while we have cause for gratitude, that, he was spared beyond the age of three score years and ten, allotted to man, we are deeply impressed by this bereavement, and our hearts mourn the loss of an honored and worthy member of this bar

As a lawyer, he was well read and possessed a clear and discriminating mind, and in all his business relations, he was judicious, prudent and reliable, and a safe counsellor.

As a companion, he was social, communicative, instructive, and at times humorous and most amusing.

He was a ready writer and few had the ability to express their thoughts with greater ease, perspicuity and force.

He was a most devoted and affectionate husband and father, a considerate and kind neighbor, and always true, as a friend.

Those who knew him best, loved him most. He was honored by his fellow citizens with various offices of trust and responsibility, all of which he performed with marked ability and satisfaction

As a judge, for a time, of the Court of Probate for Penobscot County, he was highly respected, was always courteous and full of sympathy for the poor and afflicted and held the scales of justice with well balanced hands

The members of Penobscot Bar will ever cherish the memory of the deceased with warm and sincere affection for his many estimable qualities, and for a heart always sympathetic and kind.

Resolved, That we proffer to the afflicted widow and children our tenderest sympathy in this their hour of sorrow and sadness and would gladly bestow all the consolation in our power.

Resolved That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to them by the clerk, as a token of our regard.

N Wilson Esq., then followed with remarks upon the life and character of the departed brother.

THE ILL-FATED JEANNETTE.

The Terrible Sufferings of the Crew as Narrated by a Maine Man.

Herbert W. Leach, of Penobscot, Hancock County Maine, was a member of the ill-fated Jeannette and the following letter is the first received by his parents since his departure for the Arctic seas. It will be read with universal interest

IRKOUTSK, Feb. 24, 1882

My Dear Mother

Your welcome letter came to hand last night I was at a party enjoying myself as well as possible for me to do here, when one of the boys came running in and gave me nine letters from home. Oh, Mother, you should have seen me dance around the room—the young ladies all thought I was crazy. They were about right. After nearly three years without hearing one single word from home, the news when it did come quite upset me. Well, I will try to give an account of myself. I will begin at the beginning. After passing through Bering's Strait we stood north until we struck the ice, we ran into it and it closed around us. We had thirty-three of the best boys on board that ever walked a ship's deck. Poor fellows, only thirteen are left to tell the sad tale. After getting into the ice, we made preparations to spend the winter, expecting to get out the following summer. We spent the winter very pleasantly—had theatricals, Christmas and New Years. It was very cold but we all enjoyed it tip top That winter passed and so did the summer without any signs of our being released, so we made up our minds to stay another winter. It passed quite pleasantly, although three months of the time we did not see the sun. It looked good when I did come up,—I think it was worth waiting for We laid in the ice till June when the ship (our home) was taken from us, then our hardships began. Oh! Mother, you can have no idea of what we went through When I look back it seems more like a strange dream than a reality. But it is over now and we that pulled through are safe. About eight days before we reached the coast we encountered a heavy gale which nearly put an end to our sufferings. When it commenced to blow, the Lieutenant put me at the helm. It was very cold and the boat was nearly full of water all the time in spite of the men's bailing for dear life. I sat at the helm about fourteen hours before the wind abated enough for me to be relieved. When the time came I rose up and fell flat into the bottom of the boat My feet were frozen stiff and my legs were chilled up to my body, so badly that I think they could have been taken off without my feeling it. When we got ashore I was in a tight fix, I was in much pain and my feet had begun to putrefy. Bartlett, one of the men, took a knife and cut out the corrupt places and cut about half of one of my great toes off, leaving about half an inch of the bone sticking out of the end. About a month ago I found a doctor who took it off. It troubles me to walk now and I think it will for some time. Guess I have written enough about my trials, and will tell you something about the people I find here in this city. The ladies here call me the saviour—they have heard about the boat scrape. We are received by the best families in town. They seem to think it a feather in their caps to have the Americans call on them. I make myself as agreeable as possible. The life is not altogether crushed out of me if I am a little run down. By the way, they are going to form a search party and I think it is my duty to join it and search for the poor boys that are left. I can't know yet whether I shall go or not. If I do you must not worry about me for we shall not start before spring, and will get back next Fall, so you see it will not be long to wait and no risk to run, and besides you want to see your son do by another as you would have another do by him. Gracious, how I want to see the folks at home. Give my love to everybody, in town and out, keep the lion's share for yourself, and believe me,

Your loving son,
HERBERT.

Mr. Jefferson acted recently in Cleveland. Last week he was in Chicago. He will continue his present tour till May 27th ending his season at Bangor.

THE ASHES UPON THE HEARTH.

I went to the old time cottage
Where I dwelt in childhood s days,
I looked through the dear old windows
That seemed to return my gaze
I sought for some sweet reminder
To bear from my place of birth,
But ah! there remained no token
But the ashes upon the hearth

The chambers were bare and empty,
And the echoes seemed to say
Oh! where is the busy household?
Oh! why do the children stay
A branch of the veteran oak tree
That now was a century old
Still curtained my little window
That mirrored the sunset s gold

I wandered to "mother's chamber
To the room where father wrote
No sound broke the mournful stillness
But the chimney swallow s note
Then again I sought the kitchen,
Once a place of joy and mirth
And naught brought the past before me
Like the ashes upon the hearth

How often we merry youngsters
For our chestnuts sweet and brown,
Made a bed in the hot wood ashes,
With the live coals dropping down,
While the girls pulled molasses candy
And ... it with glee on high,
And the golden pippins roasted
In an earthen pan near by

Since those happy days of childhood
It is fifty years or more
And the boys and girls have scattered
To many a distant shore,
While some dear hands were folded
And sheltered by Mother Earth
As they dropped away from the spirit
Like the ashes upon the hearth

IN A GLASS DARKLY

A STORY IN TWO PARTS

PART II

Margaret wrote to me, but at rare intervals and now and again I fancied I detected a thin veil of reserve between her heart and mine a something that made me wish I could fly over to that old chateau all among the shadowy woods of which she told me

I felt as if I should know it if I saw it and greet it as we greet an old familiar friend

The well with its moss grown margin and low wall and the bright patch far down below the face of the water looking up to the sky and mirroring it The pigeons fluttering from the gables of the manor falling softly on the red tiled yard where Mazie fed them with grain The old clock set in the centre of the arch through which you entered the court yard and the eerie sound of its long dolorous chime hour by hour

All these things I could realize

I could fancy Margaret, a fair picture framed in so quaint a setting, sitting on the margin of the well with her work or her book while Mazie ol... the pigeons who went strutting daintily hither and thither as much as to say

Catch us if you can little lady!

I could fancy Margaret wandering in those same shadowy woods still with Mazie by her side, or watching the sea crawling in along the golden sands, listening to it low sobbing against the rocks, and thinking the while of Friend Janet

I could fancy all these things, but what part did Margaret s husband play in this sylvan scene and why did I never hear anything of Madame Le Breton?

Had there been any explanation of Mr Westmacott s flight south? If so, why did Margaret not tell me of it And, most vital question of all, when was my friend coming back to me again, when were my vigils by my cheery fire to be no longer shared only by Pilfer and the cat?

At length came a letter much like its fellows inasmuch as it told of things not people—always excepting Mazie who played an important role in all her mother s correspondence—but to which was appended not without some signs of hurry either a postscript which gave me an ugly twinge at my heart, which made me fear I know not what

It ran thus

I wish that Mazie and her mother were sitting by the fire with you and Pilfer, happy and safe with Friend Janet

It was the word safe that hit me like a blow Did some danger threaten Margaret?

Shame upon you Janet Grain for a doting old woman with a head full of bavering and nonsense it s just a daft fool you are my dear ' said I to myself, folding the letter and putting it in my pocket Anyway I answered it that night before I slept and went nearer to trying to search out what Margaret seemed fain to keep hidden than ever I had done before

No more letters came from the old Brittany manor house, and knowing Mr Westmacott s eccentric ways I began to think that he and his wife and child might have left France in the same hurried way as they had left England I even conjectured that they might be coming home—on their way—or at hand Margaret was fond of giving those she loved a pleasant surprise as witness her sly way of coming to be my opposite neighbor I confided these hopes and conjectures to Pilfer who wagged his tail madly but finally he looked doubtful and laid him down with the usual deep sigh

Though I was getting on in years I was hale and hearty It is the idle folk who grow prematurely old and I had never been that I could never remember having an hour on my hands that I did not know what to do with and though oftimes a lonesome soul it was not from want of occupation but from lack of home ties from the memory of bitter sorrow in early life sorrow out of whose chill shadow life did not seem long enough to draw me

The evenings of these sunny winter days were of exquisite beauty—glowing skies saffron tinting to a white and glistening world So still was the still air that never a solitary leaf clinging to its parent branch by a slender shrivelled stem did not stir

I wanted but three days to Christmas Eve and I had been out, first to the town to buy a Christmas offering for Polly then some way along suburban roads roads thickly wooded on either hand where amid a labyrinth of twigs and stems presently the robin sang swelling his little crimson breast and nut brown throat, rejoicing in the sunny days I walked further than I intended for the beauty of the evening lured me on, and so by the time that Pilfer and I reached home it was quite dark, the saffron and the red had died out of the sky and the white world had turned to gray I took off my bonnet warmed my hands—for though bright the day had been cold—then I strolled slowly across the room to the window

The lamplighter had dotted all one side of the grove with his lamps the other side was still and dark But I had scarcely looked across the way when I uttered a cry Caught the heavy window curtain in my hand and stood staring Yes, yes, my fancy had proved true

Margaret had been hoarding up for me a Christmas gift—her own sweet self and little Mazie The room in the house opposite was full of a faint soft light—a light which I thought must come from the fire It shone on the little head all over short bright locks the head which had so often lain against my shoulder when Margaret and I talked together by the firelight, it shone on the figure of little Mazie clasped about the shoulders by her mother s arm

I could not at that distance see the features of either mother or child, but there was something strangely statuesque in Margaret s attitude and when I waved my hand the greeting met with no responce

The child seemed clinging to the mother, the mother looked not at the child but straight across at me

Good Heaven!' I said speaking under my breath, 'some horrible thing has happened, it almost seems as though Margaret seeks protection for the child'

At this moment Pilfer, who had lingered by the kitchen fire since we came in ran into the room and came to the window

Then, with one glad shrill cry, that ecstasy of welcome always held sacred to Mazie and Mazie alone, he sprang up against the glass but bethought him of a better way to reach the haven of his fond desire, and rushed madly down the stairs.

Stopping only to catch up my bonnet from where it lay on the couch I followed

How cold the night had turned! A sudden rising wind whistled through the tall poplars and the shuddering lindens

Another moment and Pilfer and I stood on the doorstep of the opposite house.

I had never stopped to ask myself if my proceedings were wise—if my prompt appearance might be welcome to the master of the house.

I only wanted to get to Margaret.

The fanlight above the door showed no glimmer The bell as I rang it seemed to echo through a silent vault

Pilfer, howling and barking in an agony of impatience, stood with his nose shoved up against the door

No one came. The lamplighter had finished his task, and gone his way. Not a soul was astir in the white waste around me; not a sound broke the stillness of the house whose portal seemed closed against me

I was just going to ring again when in from the dusky grayness of the road came a figure—commonplace, homely, real—Mrs Crawshaw, the deaf caretaker of the house

She had been out marketing, and carried a basket on her arm She evidently regarded my presence on her doorstep at that time of night as an unspeakable impertinence She laughed in my face when I had succeded in making her understand that I was under the impression Mrs Westmacott had returned—in fact, had seen her and the child at the window While I shouted, and the deaf woman—evidently under the impression she was speaking in a voice rather subdued than otherwise—bawled her replies, poor Pilfer appeared to be fast becoming rabid, so hot was his impatience

Drat the dog!' said Mrs Crawshaw as he rushed like a vision past her portly person the instant she slipped the latch key into the lock and opened the door

I have no doubt she would have said, "Drat the lady, too," if she had spoken the language of her heart

What she did say was this

' Go and look for yourself if there's any thing here but me and the beedles

A dip-candle stood on the hall table together with a box of matches Mrs Crawshaw lit the candle and then she and I mounted to the first floor sitting-room It was bare and chill enough, for all the little knickknacks that had made it homelike and pretty were gone The furniture was in dis order In the cold, dark grate were the dead embers of a fire and strewed above them various odds and ends which it had struck Mrs Crawshaw s fancy to throw there

' I ain t set it to right yet " said the old woman feeling I suppose that some apology was called for, then she added, uneasily ' What ever is ado with that there 'dratted creetur

What indeed? Shivering, cowering whining in most piteous fashion, Pilfer indeed presented a lamentable spectacle Not much worse, perhaps, than did I myself, but then, happily, sometimes we can not see ourselves

It is terrible to me—even now at this long distance of years—to write of the time that followed on that awful night I tried to put the memory of it from me, but the vision remained as distinctly painted on the canvas of my mind as if still before my eyes

And no letter came from Margaret—none Soon to all my mental disquiet was added a mysterious and overpowering sense of illness I say mysterious, because no physical causes were present to account for the symptoms that declared themselves My heart throbbed in a labored manner that at times made me feel as though my hold on life were truly but a feeble clutch that at any moment might loosen In the night I woke up bathed in cold sweats Sitting erect in the darkness wiping away the beads of moisture from breast and brow, I was conscious of being under some terrible ' possession ' Some unseen presence seemed forever near me, some ghastly hand tearing at my bosom as though to rend the soul from out my tortured body

And still no letter came from Margaret

Surely I began to think, ' this distressful vision has disordered my imagination, and distorted my fancy ' I scarce dared glance at the house over the way lest once more the faint soft light the statue still form of my lost friend, should sear my eyes like the blast from a seething furnace

I have used the expression 'lost' to Margaret because in spite of myself as it were, I thought of her as something taken from me—parted from me by some immeasurable gulf, some grim and ghastly barrier

Sitting solitary by my "ain fireside ' one gruesome night when the bare branches of the climbing roses kept dashing themselves wildly against the panes, when the wind keened as though singing the coronach of the old year that was fast dying I came to a sudden and firm resolve. What that resolve was may best be gathered from the events of the morrow, a day spent by Polly in ejaculatory exclamations over my preparations for a journey

By the late tidal train I went south, crossed the Channel in the gloom of a winter s night, and landed at St Malo in the gray light of the early morning

I seemed unconscious of everything round me, blind to all else save that I was journeying between a sky where clouds drifted fast and thick across the face of a wintry moon, and a sea where foam tipped waves rolled and tumbled—journeying on to Margaret

It her dear hand—how well I knew its soft and satiny touch—had been clasping mine the whole way, I could not have felt more as if her will was leading me drawing me on with irresistible force Whither and for what I knew not I was led I could but follow

From St Malo I had to make my way to San Briac There I was told that the way to Chateau Breton lay along the coast, and then that Madame would have to journey through the woods at this time of the year of a loneliness truly excessive Madame was however by no means appalled by this description of the route by which the Chateau Breton must be reached, and set off at once in a carriage

I saw the shimmer of smoke across a group of trees a red tick gable a tall narrow gateway

' Voila le Chateau Breton "said my conductor whipping up his rather sorry steed, as though he thought himself called upon to make as brave an appearance as possible before the inhabitants of the imposing structure ahead of us Alas! his ambition, though laudable was doomed to be nipped in the bud I called a halt, paid him the fare—and a liberal douceur in addition, which caused him to grin from ear to ear, and salute me with a grace at once charming and hoisted—dismissed him took my modest travelling bag in my hand and made for the tall gateway No one appeared to be guarding it therefore I passed on, up a broad but neglected pathway over which trees met and interlaced

On reaching the end of this avenue I saw the chateau

There it was just as I had pictured it in my mind s eye The archway leading into the courtyard the well in the centre, its margin broad and moss-grown the pigeons circling round about, dropping light as snowflakes on the edge, preening their pretty feathers, bowing, strutting, cooing But there was no Margaret sitting in the sunshine, with Mazie playing at her feet

Two figures, a man and a woman came slowly down an alley of trees on my right

The man was Alfred Westmacott, the woman (to whom he leaned with a manner at once tender and familiar) was not Margaret

No, this woman had a dark, beautiful face bold, flashing eyes, a finely cut yet pitilessly cruel mouth—in fact, one could note a certain resemblance between herself and her companion In a word it was his cousin, Madame Le Breton, the young, fair and wealthy widow of whom Margaret had told me As Mr Westmacott became aware of my presence, I saw him start and then fell back a pace He spoke hurriedly and softly to the lady She—after one single instant of hesitation—came forward to meet me

"Madame is a stranger, she has lost her way,' she said, speaking in fair enough English though with a foreign lisp

"No," I said bluntly, and looking not at her, but beyond to where stood Mr Westmacott, hat in hand, pale too, but as I felt with a thrill of infinite repugnance unabashed, "I have not lost my way This is the Chateau Breton—am I not right?'

' Madame is so good as to pay us the infinite honor of a visit?' put in the widow

Again, as I answered, I looked not at her but at her companion

' No, I cannot lay claim to such 'politesse ' I have come to see my friend—your wife '

"You have not then heard—" began madame, with a passing glance at her own sweeping black robe.

"Your wife, your wife, where is your wife?" I cried, pressing up to Mr. Westmacott s side, and grasping his arm roughly, I fear, for mine are no fairy fingers.

"Pardon," said the lady, "you touch a fresh wound, his grief is too new "

"Where is Margaret?" I cried again, and (there could be no possible justification of my violence; it was all wrong I doubt not, and yet I do not repent it, I never have repented it) I shook him, not tenderly, by the arm I grasped He turned away, covering his eyes with his hand. Now he faced me, eye answered to eye, soul to soul, for that one moment his black heart lay bare before me.

"My wife died a month ago," he said

Was it my fancy that for one fleeting instant a smile lurked about the mouth shadowed by the thick black sweep of his moustache? As Heaven is my witness, I saw that devilish smile come and go—or thought I did But it was more a memory that came after than a thing noted at the time, for, as he said that one word—"died '—the sylvan woods, the archway, the well, with its lovely freight of white winged birds, the man and woman standing near me, all the world, myself with it, seemed to become intangible shadows, things seen from afar

I clenched my hand till the nails pierced the palm, I drew one long deep breath—another, yet another I had never fainted in my life—I was not going to faint now—but oh, dear Heaven! my darling had left me—had gone out into the darkness and the silence of death, with never a word of greeting, never a kiss good-by, for Friend Janet!

All of the story of Margaret's death that ever I learnt, I will set down here at once She had "drooped ' they said, the air of Brittany had, maybe been antipathetic to her—who might say? One day, sitting out in the sunshine, she had a "crise nerveuse —a strange sort of seizure—that caused Madame Le Breton apprehensions of the most grave With her own hands she prepared a tisane for cette pauvre Marguerite "

A doctor was consulted He could discover nothing but the heart was weak he said A few days later Margaret complained of lethergy, a strange confusion of vision, coldness of the extremeties They hastened to fetch the physician, but before he arrived the patient had sunk into a stupor, and that stupor had passed into death

A few—very few—further particulars I gleaned from Nanine It appeared that for a time both she and Mazie had been denied access to Margaret s chamber At last Nanine in a frenzy of despair had caught up the child and made her way to her mistress's side in spite of all opposition Margaret opened her eyes, held out her arms Mazie sprang to meet that ineffable embrace and lay still enfolded by the mother s clasp when the last breath exhaled from the livid lips

Was it evening when your mistress died?' I said almost stifled by the beating of my heart as I spoke

Neither night nor day, said Nanine, just what me, madame call entre chien et loup I saw the flicker of the big lamp over the archway on the wall just before

But Nanine finished her sentence to the empty air while I upon my knees, flung in a passionate mingling of sorrow and thankfulness at the feet of God shuddering weeping rejoicing cried that I was but a worm in his sight, in whose hands are alike, the living and the dead

In the midst of the valley of my grief was one fair hill of content My home was to be Mazie s and Pilfer was to have his playfellow back again

I had not had to sue hard for this precious gift In truth, both Mr Westmacott and madame seemed glad to be well rid of the child

Muzzie has leaved Mazie said the little one, after her first joyous greetings to me Don t you leave Mazie too, Friend Janet!

I took her to Margaret s grave, I vowed a vow that henceforth my life should be Mazie s not my own ' God deal with me as I with thee' I sobbed kissing the sweet baby face through streaming tears

What dread fate had hung over that golden head, who can tell? She was to be sent into the country, to some ' relative of madame s

Nanine was to be sent back to her own home in Paris But never would I have rested in my bed never would I have stayed my feet until they had led me to Mees Janet I would have put myself in the black ship and crossed the sea—I would have told the story of it all Mon Dieu! but they killed my sweet mistress those two evil ones and now the people say that soon before the grass is grown on my sweet mistress' grave—

Hush!' I said, sternly too Of what avail to clothe suspicion in a black garment of words? Of what avail reproaches? Of what avail anything—now?'

Would they bring back the dead—would they give me back my lost darling?

I think I kept the vow made at Margaret s grave. Mazie, from the day I brought her to the home henceforth to be hers as well as mine became as my own child With the passing of the years, as I grew old and—not in turn, that it is not in my blood to be—but withered and (outward ly) hardened more and more by time she blossomed into sweetest maidenhood, looked at me with Margaret s eyes, spoke with her voice, moved with her matchless grace Nanine—promoted from the post of nurse to that of maid—older, yellower, sharper as of nose, but daintily neat as ever, often said to me that it seemed like having given back to us from the grave that sweet mistress ' who had died, in silence, gloom and mystery, in the lonely house among the woods

Only once in all the years have I ever chanced to cross the path of Alfred West macott And—so terrible was our meeting—that I almost shrink from setting down its record

Mazie had grown to be a tall sweet faced girl of thirteen years slim as a hazel wand lovely with every dawning grace of womanhood She and I, always with Nanine in attendance were travelling from this air climate to that—from this new land to the other For I wanted my darling to see something of the world, not to live cooped up in a little island in one corner of it until she grew full of insular prejudices, narrow minded a mere British bigot

We had left behind us sunny Malta, with its steps of stairs, its orange groves, its fitful strains of music, in moonlit streets, its grand old bastions, its lovely bays and now we lingered on the Rock looked at the Spanish store of knick-knackery in the booths, visited the cork woods lying green beneath a dome of cloudless blue, their feet washed by a sea of azure One sight we saw that blasted all the rest, withering our sweet content, a sight that smote the eye, and filled the heart with a flood of pity.

Chained two and two red from head to foot with the red dust of the red rock they toiled in we came upon a band of convicts Above the miserable crew, perched on a ledge of rock watchful, alert, ready were two warders, pistols in hand If any man had tried to escape, they would have shot him down like a dog

We stood for a moment spell-bound, so unexpected was the cruel sight Mazie caught my hand shrinking up to my side

And I, what did I do?

I know not, but I must have uttered some smothered cry, for the warders look ed at me sharply and then came a click

The pistols were cocked, ready in case of need

It was horrible—terrible—a weird experience in very truth Most horrible—most weird of all the eyes of one of those chained wild beasts raised to mine, eyes that had been black, but from which the color had been burnt out, eyes blear and bloodshot, but, for all these changes eyes that I knew for those of Alfred Westmacott.

One fleeting instant they rested on the fair face full of heavenliest pity the face of his own child—Mazie.

Then the convict smiled, his head dropped on his breast he bent to his weary task, and we passed on The father's heart was not—for all his bitter degradation—dead within him; for the smile that stirred his parched, pale lips was that of a thankful tenderness, not an evil challenge of defiance, such as I had seen there in a bygone day And Mazie—not knowing—spoke often to me in time to come of the gang of convicts we had seen toiling at the sun beaten Rock —All the Year Round

What Happened to "JOSEPH BEACH"

Stone in the Kidney Expelled After Using Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" About two Weeks.

One of the most remarkable cases that has ever been brought to the notice of the public is that of Mr J S Beach, of Stone Bridge, Ulster Co N Y Mr Beach had suffered since October 18th 1874, from the presence of Calculus or Stone in the right Kidney No less than seven physicians were employed at different times, to whom Mr Beach paid hundreds of dollars for medical treatment with only temporary relief from his agony

By the urgent solicitations of his friends he was induced to try Dr David Kennedy s Favorite Remedy —experience a marked improvement from the first day he began to use the medicine, on the 15th of September he voided a stone as large as could be passed through the natural channel

Mr Beach concludes a long letter to Dr Kennedy by saying ' It will always afford me pleasure to recommend the Favorite Remedy to those who may be suffering from d... of the Kidneys and Bladder, or any disorders arising from an impure state of the blood The Favorite Remedy' is ... by all druggists The Doctor s only address is Rondout New York
